Instant Journal

Loves cheese but hates pizza. Fearless on the playground (too fearless) but terrified of the dark. And next month? Kids change so quickly, it’s hard to keep up. Take five to record what your child is all about right this second.

Ask your child what he wants to be when he grows up, and why.

What are you learning from your child these days?

Make a list of your child’s current likes and dislikes:

Make It Now

Write your child's name vertically down this page, in big letters. Then add an adjective for each of those letters, acrostic style, that describes your child (for example, CLAIRE: Curious, Literal, Artistic, and so on); older children can supply the adjectives themselves.
