STUDENT ACTIVITY: CONSERVATISM & LIBERALISM, PART 1

Decide who in your group will study conservatism and who will study liberalism. The student studying conservatism will identify examples of conservatism from a speech given by Herbert Hoover (Student Activity, “Part 2”) and record them on the chart below. The student studying liberalism will identify examples of liberalism from a speech given by Franklin Roosevelt at his first inauguration in 1932 (“Part 3”) and record them on the chart below. When you and your partner have finished recording examples of conservatism and liberalism, combine your notes so that you both have a complete chart.
